10 Greek Words Every Christian Should Know

by Troy Spradlin

While many of us primarily communicate in English, it's fascinating to note the diverse roots of our native tongue. You might be surprised to find that a significant portion of our English vocabulary has French origins, comprising over 28% of our lexicon. Second is Latin, contributing another 28%, followed by German at 25%, and Greek at just over 5% (refer to the accompanying pie chart). As you can see, English borrows heavily from other languages. But such linguistic diversity means that we likely recognize more foreign words than we might realize. Considering this, diligent Bible students will find it a worthwhile endeavor to familiarize themselves with a few key terms from the original language of the New Testament: Koine Greek. Knowing their true meanings helps us understand what the penmen of the Bible intended to transmit to the reader, because several words simply don't translate neatly into English, losing their depth and nuance. So, here are ten essential Biblical Greek words every Christian should know:

- Agape - is the word most commonly translated as "love." But it is not just any kind of love; it is a special type of love, one in which you have complete control and is not dependent upon another's response. It is an unconditional love that knows no boundaries or limitations. It is the kind of love Jesus refers to in John 13:35 and in Matthew 22:37-39. The other Greek words for love are: phileo (brotherly love); storge (familial love); and eros (matrimonial, intimate love).
- Adelphos (adelphoi) - is the word for brother (or, brethren). It occurs some 346 times in the New Testament. It is where we get our word "Philadelphia" (phileo = love + adelphos = brother). Some examples are found Mark 3:24,35; Heb 2:17.
- Anthropos - our English word anthropology is derived from this word, which means "man, mankind, or human being." It is found 560 times in the New Testament. See Matthew 16:26; Philippians 2:8; Luke 19:10 as examples.
- Baptizo (baptizma) - is the word transliterated (meaning "to represent with letters from another alphabet") into our English word, baptism. But that doesn't express its true meaning, which is always immersion, or to submerge. It never means anything other than that - certainly not "sprinkle, or pour." See Matt 3:16; John 3:23; Acts 8:38.
- Eis - an important preposition that always means "into, unto, to, towards, for" as in, "baptized into Christ" (Rom 6:3), or "for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38). Much confusion has been generated over this word by denominational theologians, erroneously stating that it means "because of." See also Matt 28:19; Gal 3:27 .
- Ekklesia - most often translated as church, but it actually means "assembly, gathering." It depicts the body of Christ in both a universal and local sense. See Acts 19:32; Romans 16:16; Matthew 16:18; and Revelation 1:4
- Kurios - means "owner; he to whom a person or thing belongs; title given to: God, the Messiah." It occurs some 747 times between the first chapter of Matthew to the last verse of the New Testament, Revelation 22:21.
- Logos - is the word used to describe Jesus the Christ in John 1:1. It literally means "word." It occurs more than 325 times and is sometimes translated as "doctrine, preaching, sayings." Acts 20:32; Matt. 13:20-23; Hebrews 4:12.
- Proskuneo - is the word translated worship. It is a compound word (kuneo = to kiss + pros = toward), that literally means, "to blow a kiss toward." It is a physical gesture of affection, or reverence. Rev 4:10; Matt 2:11, 28:9.
- Theos - is the word translated God. Our English derivative is theology, which means "the study of God." This word is found more than 1300 times in the Greek of the New Testament. Matt 4:10; 1 John 4:1-15; Rev 4:8.
